

Attention Longport Residents - Notices Recently to Property Owners Regarding Water Service Lines of Unknown Material

Notices were recently sent on behalf of the Borough of Longport to all property owners who have a water service line of unknown material. This means that the Borough has not yet identified the type of pipe that provides water to your home, such as copper, plastic, etc. There is a possibility that your home is served by a lead or galvanized service line. The Lead Service Line Replacement Law requires community water systems in New Jersey, such as Longport, to identify and replace all lead and galvanized service lines in their system. Under this law, the Borough was required to send notices to all property owners served by an unknown service line. Longport is in the process of developing engineering plans to identify and replace all lead and galvanized service lines in the Borough. This work is scheduled to begin in 2025 and will take several years. Residents should not be alarmed by this notice. The Borough's lead testing over the years has been well under acceptable limits. If you are concerned about exposure to lead, please visit this website for additional information: <https://www.nj.gov/dep/watersupply/dwc-lead-consumer.html>.
